

New Luther Village Director of Operations Rick Remington visits the community's serenity garden.

Rick Remington loves being out in nature and is skilled at capturing its beauty, strength and splendor. Here is his photo of a black-chinned hummingbird.

New Director of Operations Brings Expertise to Luther Village

THE FIRST FULL-EQUITY OWNERSHIP RETIREMENT COMMUNITY IN THE MIDWEST OFFERS A RESORT-LIKE ENVIRONMENT

LUTHER VILLAGE'S NEW Director of Operations is no stranger to high-end resorts, gourmet-quality food, and top-quality wines. Rick Remington joined the Luther Village management team in March, after four years at Pheasant Run Resort & Spa, a resort and expo center in St. Charles, Illinois, where he was assistant general manager, overseeing a theatre, comedy club, full spa, four restaurants, two lounges, an 18-hole golf course, and events in the expansive meeting space. Remington now calls Arlington Heights home, just like the 750 residents of Luther Village's active-lifestyle community.

Living at Luther Village is not unlike living at a resort, according to the seniors, 55 and older, who live there. The campus center, Wittenberg Commons, boasts facilities which include a fitness center with pool, two restaurants, a library, billiards room, pharmacy, general store, wellness center, bank, and salon.

Meetings, music and other performances, worship services, and classes also take place there. Luther Village's four midrise buildings, with homes featuring a wide range of floor plans, connect to Wittenberg Commons. These buildings, and Luther Village's townhomes, are set on 55 acres around a series of ponds connected with walking paths and bridges and graced with a fishing pier, gardens, and the Summer House recreational building. The capable staff ensures residents enjoy a maintenance-free lifestyle, free from chores like exterior painting, lawn mowing, and snow shoveling.

Remington looks forward to working where his clients are residents and owners, not short-term guests. Luther Village, which has the distinction of being the first full-equity ownership retirement community in the Midwest, features a different concept in retirement living: Luther Village residents own their homes through cooperative ownership and enjoy all the financial advantages that go along with owning shares in a co-op.

Living at Luther Village can feel luxurious and frugal at the same time, since a low monthly fee covers all the basics. Services that all residents are likely to enjoy are generally included, but optional add-ons are available to make life even more pleasant. From housekeeping to catered parties and events, help is steps or a phone call away. Couples save even more, because Luther Village has no second-person fee. And if your family includes friendly, furry creatures, know that Luther Village is pet friendly.

Remington has worked in the resort and hotel business for more than 30 years, including in management positions with restaurants like the Lettuce Entertain You chain and Smith and Wollensky. He is a certified sommelier, knowledgeable and excited by anything related to wine.

A native of Palatine, Remington lives in Arlington Heights with his wife, Jennifer, and their three dogs, Kona, Reagan, and Janzi. Beyond cooking and wine—and the Chicago Cubs—he loves hiking and nature photography, capturing everything from rattlesnakes to wolves and birds.

He will share his skills and interests with all at Luther Village and add to the vitality, luxury, and efficiency of the community. His goal is to make Luther Village the region's premier retirement community. U
